

Fairfax

Fairfax has a rich cultural history as one of Cleveland's historically black neighborhoods and is the origin community of Langston Hughes, Jesse Owens, Dorothy Dandridge, Bobby Womack and other notable figures of cultural inspiration. Fairfax is also home to Karamu House, the nation's first inter-racial theater and arts center, as well as numerous historically black churches located in historic buildings.

GardenWalk gives residents an opportunity to showcase their investments in urban sustainability, home renovations and community pride. The new Innovation Square, a mixed-use, mixed-income development brings employment, cultural opportunities, housing opportunities, and small business development opportunities to the neighborhood.
